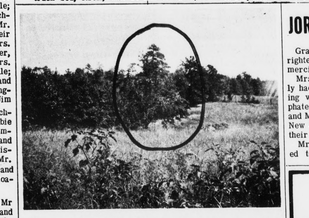
Rescue-Cleanup Job Continues

John Harvey stands beside the second Pearson hauling truck brought in from flood-ravaged Nelson County. Moses Motor Co. again supplied the equipment to help dig out this battered cab from mud and debris. The truck bed, itself, was so full of water, it had to be "bailed out" before the unit could be pried from its muddy berth. Harvey says that he doesn't usually wear his trouser cuffs this high, but with conditions as they were, a driver or worker can hardly expect to stay neat on a major rescue - cleanup job.



Pear Tree With "Double Load"

Usually the staff at the Times-Virginian considers no challenge too "tough" when it comes to picture taking, but this photo of a pear tree loaded with both pears and blossoms may have to wait for a hardier photographer. Seems that there's also a nice family of hogs living near the pear tree at the Gibson place near Evergreen (a farm owned by Percy George), and upon advice of a wiser head, the photographer decided not to trust a possible "distrustful" sow. Therefore, the curious are invited to look for themselves -- and take the word of farm owner George that his pear tree is acting somewhat like the orange trees of Florida and elsewhere which at one and the same time can have blossoms, green fruit, and ripe fruit.
